LEGAL RIGHTS FOR LGBTQ+ EMPLOYEES & STUDENTS
California law is clear and sweeping in its protection of LGBTQ+ employees from discrimination because of gender identity, sexual orientation, or due to the employer’s assumptions about the employee’s gender identity or sexual orientation.

The law, Gov’t. Code Sec. 12940, also protects against harassment based on sexual orientation or marital status, and requires employers to take all reasonable steps to prevent harassment from occurring, even when that harassment comes from third parties.

The Civil Rights Department (CRD) has jurisdiction over complaints of employment discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation. CRD investigates discrimination complaints and can help parties resolve their disputes without resorting to a lengthy and expensive litigation process. In limited cases, CRD may pursue litigation on behalf of an employee who has filed a discrimination complaint.

Under Gov’t. Code §12940(a) it is an unlawful practice for California employers, including school districts and county offices of education, to refuse to hire, to refuse to select for a training program leading to employment, to discharge from employment, or to discriminate in compensation or in terms, conditions or privileges of employment on the basis of sexual orientation. Gov’t. Code §12940(j) prohibits harassment by employers on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, and gender expression. Under the Unruh Civil Rights Act [Cal. Civ. Code Sec. 51] it is also illegal for any business to refuse to provide full and equal accommodations, advantages, facilities, privileges, or services on the basis of sexual orientation or marital status.
YES. The California law that prohibits discrimination on the basis of gender identity, gender expression, and/or sexual orientation extends to those employees who have not made a public issue of their gender identity, gender expression, and/or sexual orientation as well as those who are out. It also protects employees from discrimination motivated by an employer's perception of an individual’s gender identity and/or sexual orientation.

While Gov't. Code §12926 defines “sexual orientation” to mean “heterosexuality, homosexuality, and bisexuality,” it also makes clear that this includes the perception of a person’s sexual orientation and people who are associated with others who have or are perceived to have a particular sexual orientation.

Gov't Code §12926(r)(2) defines “sex” to include a person’s gender. “Gender” means sex, and includes a person’s gender identity and gender expression. “Gender expression” means a person’s gender-related appearance and behavior whether or not stereotypically associated with the person’s assigned sex at birth.

Yes. “Sex” as defined in Gov’t. Code §12926(r)(2) includes a person’s gender identity and gender-related appearance and behavior, whether or not “stereotypically associated with the person’s assigned sex at birth.” For example, the Civil Rights Department has determined that under California law, all employees have the right to be reasonably accommodated in gender identity transition plans, and to use restroom and locker facilities that correspond with their gender identity, regardless of their assigned sex at birth, including providing unisex bathroom facilities where possible.
• Call your CTA staff representative. They can help you seek all available remedies, including referring you to a CTA Group Legal Services attorney. They can also be valuable in getting support systems in place for you.

• Consider filing a complaint of discrimination with the California Civil Rights Department, the administrative agency that enforces the Fair Employment and Housing Act, Gov’t. Code §12900, et seq. Filing such a complaint is a prerequisite for filing a lawsuit in court. Complaints must be filed within three years of the date the employee was harmed by the discrimination.

• Take a representative with you to all meetings with your supervisor if you believe those meetings relate to your sexual orientation, gender expression, or gender identity.

• Document meetings, harassment, or other examples of discriminatory treatment. This includes harassment by co-workers and by parents. Your employer has a duty to stop such harassment if it knows or should have known of the harassment.

• Bring your complaint to the governing board of your school district through its internal complaint procedures.

• File a grievance if your collective bargaining agreement contains a nondiscrimination clause on the basis of sexual orientation, gender expression, or gender identity.

• DO NOT BE INTIMIDATED INTO RESIGNING FROM YOUR JOB.

• Remember that you are also protected from retaliation and discrimination by your employer for having engaged in protected activities such as bringing complaints and filing grievances under contractual procedures. If your employer retaliates against you, this would be an additional illegal act, and you may have the option to file an additional retaliation complaint against your employer.
What If I Am Being Harassed By Students or Parents?

The District can be held liable for the discriminatory conduct of parents when the employer adopts or ratifies that conduct, in accordance with Education Code §51500 which prohibits a school district from sponsoring any activity that promotes a discriminatory bias on the basis of gender or sexual orientation. For example, a district cannot accede to a demand from a parent that a student be removed from a lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, or queer teacher’s class simply because of the teacher’s sexual orientation, gender expression, or gender identity. This also likely would be considered unlawful discrimination under FEHA.

Another law, the California Student Safety and Violence Prevention Act, declares the policy of this state to afford all persons in public schools, regardless of sex, race, national origin or sexual orientation equal rights and opportunities in the educational institutions of this state. [Educ.Code §200, 220]. This requires a school district employer to protect its employees from discrimination by parents or students.

How Do I File a Complaint With the State?

You can file a complaint with the Civil Rights Department (CRD) on-line at calcivilrights.ca.gov or by calling 1(800) 884-1684. You will fill out an intake form, and if CRD determines the conduct is covered by the laws that CRD enforces, it will prepare a complaint form for your signature. CRD will then investigate, which may include contacting witnesses and the employer, and subpoenaing documents, if necessary. CRD will also offer an opportunity for the parties to conciliate, or attempt to settle the matter informally. If conciliation is unsuccessful, and the investigation concludes that it is probable that discrimination has occurred, the matter may be referred to the legal department of CRD. Department lawyers have the discretion to litigate the case by filing a lawsuit on your behalf.

If CRD determines not to pursue litigation of your case or if you would rather litigate the case in civil court, you can obtain a right-to-sue letter from the CRD, which is essentially permission to proceed in court.

For further information about the complaint process, visit the Civil Rights Department website at calcivilrights.ca.gov.

Are Domestic Partners Entitled to Employer-Provided Health Insurance?

Generally, yes. Registered domestic partners are entitled to the same health benefits that spouses receive. If your employer does not provide coverage for domestic partners, contact your CTA staff person, who will consult with the Legal Department on how best to enforce this right.
What Are the Remedies for Sexual Orientation or Gender Identity Discrimination?

When pursuing a complaint for discrimination, potential remedies include:
1. an order to employ, or reinstate;
2. reimbursement of lost wages and benefits, out-of-pocket losses, plus interest;
3. affirmative relief, such as personnel training or policy changes;
4. front pay;
5. compensation for emotional distress damages; punitive damages against private-sector employers or individuals; and
6. reasonable attorneys fees and costs.

Contact your local CTA staff representative if you believe you have suffered discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation. The staff representative can assist in working out an informal resolution to the problem. If such a resolution is not possible, the staff representative would be able to:
1. file a grievance, if the collective bargaining agreement has been violated;
2. help you file a charge with the Civil Rights Department, or
3. refer you to a Group Legal Services (GLS) Attorney. CTA will pay for two hours of consultation with an attorney for job-related matters, if you are a member, and may also pay for additional legal services.

Is There Legal Protection for LGBTQ+ Students?

State law - The Student Safety and Violence Prevention Act of 2000, Educ. Code Sections 200 and 220, prohibits discrimination against any person on the basis of disability, gender, gender identity, gender expression, nationality, race or ethnicity, religion, or sexual orientation in any school program or activity conducted by an educational institution that receives financial assistance from the state. The School Success and Opportunity act requires that pupils be permitted to participate in sex-segregated school programs, activities, and use facilities consistent with their gender identity. School districts have a legal obligation to prevent harassment of students based on gender identity or sexual orientation and to provide an environment that is safe and supportive of LGBTQ+ students.

Federal law - Title IX - also prohibits sexual discrimination and harassment of students in public schools. The U.S. Department of Education’s Office for Civil Rights (OCR) has also enforced Title IX to require school districts to treat transgender students in accordance with their gender identity.
